Who Are The Emerging Artists At The 2025 Aotearoa Art Fair?

Nostalgic, constructivist, questioning. These local artists are the next big thing.

When Aotearoa Art Fair returns from May 1-4 thousands of local and international visitors will flock to Auckland's Viaduct Events Centre to peruse curated showings from leading galleries in New Zealand and Australia.

Reflecting the breadth and diversity of the contemporary arts community in Aotearoa, alongside works by venerated artists, the event also spotlights artists who represent the next generation.

Tori Beeche

Crafted through a process in which poetic moments from historical image archives are extracted and interlaced with personal memories and imaginings, Beeche's works often portray a nostalgic longing for her Scandinavian heritage filtered through the lens of a life living and working in Tāhuna, Queenstown.
